Curfew Will Ring.

In response to a delegation from the school board it was decided at the council meeting held Tuesday evening that the curfew should be rung each night to warn the youngsters in town to hike for home.

From next Monday evening, until May 1st, the bell will be rung at 9 p.m., and thereafter, until September 1st, at 9:30 p.m. after which times all children, 14 years of age and under, unaccompanied by parents or guardians, are required to be off the streets.

Mr. Harry Moncey has been engaged to ring the bell.

The question of licensing truck owners selling coal in town was again discussed, and the secretary reported receiving a communication from the Department stating that a provincial pedlars license was required by all persons selling coal who had not an established place of business in town.

Organize Telephone Company

Subscribers of Lines 2 and 6 met Monday and decided that as it had been found impossible to form a larger unit, to organize a company comprising Lines 2 and 6.

An organization was formed and the by-laws adopted, and arrangements were made to purchase the lines.

Officers elected were as follows: President, Mr. Arden Deadrick; Vice-President, Mr. W. J. Scheidt; Sec.-treas., Mr. James Rupp; Directors, Messrs. E. K. Pratt and N. Swalm.

Subscribers to the number of twenty have already signed contracts which is an addition of six over the present number, and it is expected that a number of others will sign contracts.

Share subscription has been set at $21.00 per share, and it was decided that the monthly fee will be $1.90, including share subscription.

On Tuesday a contract was signed with the provincial government for purchase of the lines, and the company will operate from April 1st.

Westcott Players Present Comedy

A large audience greeted the comedy, "Here Comes Charlie," given by Westcott Literary Society in the Opera House on Monday evening, and were delighted with the clever presentation.

Every member of the cast took their part in a very efficient manner and the clever comedy produced roars of laughter from the audience throughout the performance.

Between acts the Edwards Trio delighted the audience with their rendition of cowboy songs.

It was a benefit performance in aid of the Didsbury Hospital, and the net proceeds, which amounted to over $40.00, were handed to the Hospital.

The nurses and the board wish to thank the Westcott Literary Society for their kindness and public spirit in producing the play.

Religious Drama Impressive Spectacle

The religious drama, "The Rich Young Man," presented by the Albright Brotherhood and the Senior League of Christian Endeavor of Zion Evangelical Church at the church hall last Thursday night was an impressive spectacle. The scenery and lighting was very nicely done and added greatly to the effectiveness of the presentation; The costumes were in keeping with the circumstances of the play; The stage was tastefully arranged with flowers and fern, and the whole lent an atmosphere of luxury and oriental splendor. The intermission numbers were all given by local talent and were well received.

The actors each did their parts very acceptably. They put over the message of the play in a forceful and pleasing manner. Some of the parts were quite difficult and those who presented them are deserving of much praise. The two organizations under whose auspices it is being shown are to be commended for making this high class production possible.

We understand that it is to be shown again in Didsbury by request on Friday evening, April 12th. It will go from here to Olds, where it will be given in the Arena Auditorium, Tuesday evening, April 16th. Plans are also under way to take it to Carstairs, Crossfield, Calgary and other points. The proceeds will flow into the building fund of the church.

Knox United Church Notes.

The Brighter Side

For the past five years the people of Canada in common with those of other countries have been looking at the dark side of things, and during these years the picture at which they have been looking has become progressively darker and more gloomy. In fact, following the stock market crash in the late months of 1929, people generally did not seek to find any rays of light, they became more and more fearful, and preferred to dwell upon every unfavorable factor in the situation and to close their eyes and refuse to see anything that could be regarded as hopeful.

This state of mind spread throughout the whole country and, unfortunately for Western Canada, it was accentuated by reason of the advent of a cycle of abnormally dry years, accompanied by other climatic conditions, with their aftermath of pests and other drawbacks entirely beyond the control of man, and all discouraging and destructive of confidence on the part of people so grievously afflicted.

Under the circumstances the amazing thing is that people, taken on the whole, have displayed such wonderful fortitude, so much courage and such fine patience.

Within recent months the clouds of depression have been thinning, conditions have been slowly improving, and the time has come when, we think, the people of Canada may well, to their own advantage and further encouragement, take a look at some of the brighter things in our national life for which they have deep reason for thankfulness in comparison with the lot of other peoples and nations.

Unlike quite a few nations, Canada has maintained its national honor, has not repudiated but has met its national obligations. As a result, Canada stands higher than ever in the estimation of the world. It is a great asset that has not decreased in value but has been substantially increased, and that increased value will stand this Dominion in good stead in the years that lie ahead.

The general business situation in Canada is improving. In view of the economic depths to which the whole world had sunk, this improvement will naturally be slow at first, but it is gathering momentum and volume. The trade of Canada, both import and export, and internal as well, is increasing; the volume of business is becoming larger; railway revenues are rising; national revenues are substantially larger and are increasing, all of which means more employment in the not distant future, and especially so if action is taken to remove or materially lessen the many restrictions now imposed on trade.

Another bright side to the Canadian picture is to be found in the fact that, despite all the difficulties and problems, worries and sufferings of people, Canada has been remarkably free of riots and other forms of defiance of the law which have characterized other lands and resulted in open strife and bloodshed. The Canadian people have kept their heads, and as a result they are winning through, just as the people of Britain are winning through.

Considering the past, the present and the future, there is another and very large and important spot of brightness, leading to hope and confidence for the future, in the fact that almost alone among the nations of the world Canada has been free and is free of the one great burden which rests with crushing force upon the world to-day. That is the burden of armaments,—the enormous cost of warlike preparations. While other nations are paying annual tribute reckoned in hundreds of millions, even billions of dollars, to the great war god Mars, the Canadian people are not called upon to do so.

A couple of small destroyers, one on either seacoast, and a handful of militia which is merely a reserve to the established police forces of the country to assist if and when necessary in the maintenance of peace within our own borders, but in no sense an army maintained for offense against any nation,—that is all. With no great battleships, no standing army, no great line of fortifications, Canada lives at peace with the world, the friend of every nation, having no quarrel with any.

If this picture was otherwise, if the Canadian people were taxed to the limit, as other peoples are, to provide the god of war with the machinery and equipment of wholesale human destruction, then Canada might have cause to fear for the future. Fortunately, that fear does not exist.

Given a return to more normal and therefore favorable climatic conditions throughout Western Canada, with a removal of the artificial restrictions imposed upon the commercial transactions and business life of the country,—both of which conditions are not only possible but probable and ones we have every reason to expect,—and free from the entanglements of war-affrighted nations, the Canadian people without any undue optimism may well turn their eyes away from the darker picture of the past five years, and find renewed confidence and happiness in the brighter, better days now dawning.

Magic Of Science

Electric Lung Restores Speech To Persons Without Voice

An electric "lung" and a pair of magnetic handcuffs, both new, have come out of the scientific magic box of the Bell laboratories.

They were shown at a meeting of the University of Michigan Club of New York by Dr. Sergius P. Grace, vice-president of the laboratories.

The lung substitutes electric current for air to make vocal sounds in the artificial larynx, which the laboratories invented to restore speech to about 1,000 persons in the United States who have lost their vocal cords.

The new instrument is placed in the mouth, much like a pipe. It pours into the mouth a pure tone which becomes intelligible speech merely by movement of mouth, lips and tongue in ordinary conversational manner. The voiceless person uses a pocket battery little bigger than a deck of cards. He puts his "pipe" in his mouth. He presses a button and the sound continues as long as he holds this switch closed.

The magnetic handcuffs demonstrate the super-magnetic power of a new alloy which possesses 20 times the attraction of pure iron. With a cuff on each wrist, or held on each hand, the chain between is joined by placing together two flat pieces of the new metal.

The most powerful man cannot pull these plates apart.

WHY HIS HEADACHES CEASED

Wife Put Kruschen In His Coffee

He could not understand why the headaches he had been subject to suddenly ceased. His wife told him, and he at once sat down and wrote the following letter:

"I am 62 years of age, and ever since I was a boy of ten years, I was subject to very bad headaches. But two years ago the headaches stopped—for what reason I did not know. I was surprised when one day my wife told me I had been using Kruschen Salts in my coffee for over two years. I am still using them, as I know of nothing finer for the system."—J. T.

Headaches can nearly always be traced to a disordered stomach, and to the unsuspected retention in the system of stagnating waste material which poisons the blood. Remove these poisons—prevent them forming again—and you'll never have to worry any more. And that is just how Kruschen Salts brings swift and lasting relief from headaches. Kruschen Salts aid Nature to cleanse your body completely of all clogging waste matter.

Rather Hard Luck

Seventy-year-old Thomas Dresser has instituted proceedings to bring himself back to life. When he walked with his frayed bank book into a Victoria bank the other day he was surprised to find that he could not draw on his account for the reason that he was "dead." He had been declared dead by the Supreme Court of British Columbia and his estate had been ordered to be divided among his relatives.

BUILD UP THE BLOOD

Mr. C. W. Vollick of 14 Poulter St., Hamilton, Ont., said: "I have found Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery to be the best tonic to build up a weak and rundown system. It also regulated my digestion, increased my appetite and strength."

Wants Tariff On Ice Cream

The Bermuda Board of Agriculture has recommended protective duties on ice cream and the raw materials thereof. The assembly referred the matter to its finance committee for investigation. The local dairy industry suffered, it was pointed out, because during 1933 there were 512 gallons of milk and cream imported from Canada, and 22,667 gallons from the United States.

The lobster chews its food before putting it into its mouth; a set of external food choppers cuts up the food before it is passed into the mouth proper.

Little Journeys In Science

ACETYLENE

(By Gordon H. Guest, M.A.)

Acetylene is a colorless gas produced by the action of water on carbide. It is prepared in large quantities for use as an illuminant and as a source of great heat. When heated it decomposes into hydrogen and carbon. It was by this method that the Germans prepared much of the hydrogen used for filling the Zeppelins in the World War.

When compressed in cylinders, acetylene is very explosive, since the heat produced in compressing the gas is sufficient to start decomposition. However, scientists have found that acetylene can be compressed with safety by forcing it at low temperatures into steel cylinders completely filled with some porous material which has been soaked in a liquid called acetone. The gas is very soluble in this liquid and under such conditions it is not explosive.

The chief use of acetylene is in the cutting and welding of metals. For this work the gas is burned in pure oxygen in an apparatus known as the oxyacetylene blowpipe. A temperature of about 4,800 degrees Fahrenheit may be obtained in this way. In taking iron structures apart the tip of the flame is held in contact with some part of the metal, until the metal is heated to a high temperature; then more oxygen is turned on and the hot metal at once commences to burn away. By moving the tip of the flame containing the excess of oxygen over the metal plate, the metal is cut into pieces.

Recently Langmuir, an American scientist, has invented a device known as the hydrogen-arc welding torch by means of which very high temperatures can be obtained. In this type of blowpipe a stream of hydrogen is conducted from a small tube through an electric arc maintained between tungsten electrodes. A temperature of at least 10,000 degrees Fahrenheit may be reached with this new torch.

GARDENING

Gordon L. Smith

Planting Nursery Stock

The proper time to plant perennials, roses, fruit trees, shrubbery and other kinds of nursery stock is just as soon as the ground can be worked. But of course they must be purchased first. There is a vast range in prices and quality. Only shrubs and trees that are in good condition should be considered. This means that the stems and bark will be pliable and green and will have plenty of good, live buds. There will be a good root growth, and this, as well as the top, will be soft and moist. Each plant should be wrapped separately. Granted that good stock has been purchased, the next thing is to get it planted as quickly as possible and with absolutely no exposure to the open air. If the ground is still unfit to plant, open the parcel, soak in water, and plant in a shallow trench, covering the roots and most of the stems with earth firmly packed down. Leave here until permanent locations are ready.

Spring Pruning

Most pruning is done in late winter or early spring. It is not a difficult task, though a little is usually essential with all sorts of shrubs, roses and both fruit and ornamental trees. Dead growth should be removed, though at this time of year it may be difficult to detect dying from live wood. The general idea is to let in light, encourage strong growth and also turn out a tree or shrub which is fairly symmetrical. With shrubbery, pruning of those things that bloom late in the year, should be done early in the spring, but shrubs, like the Spiraea, which blossom in early summer, should not be touched with the knife until late summer. Special precautions are necessary with grape vines. If these are pruned in late spring, they will bleed profusely. The work must be carried out before the sap starts to rise. Commercial grape men leave a mere skeleton each spring as the fruit is produced on new growth. Raspberries are borne on two-year-old canes only, so that after the crop has been harvested and the new canes well started, all old wood should be removed. Most of the ordinary roses are cut back severely after growth starts in the spring, and best results are obtained from climbing roses where almost all the old wood is removed in late summer after blooming is over. With flowering shrubs, the aim is to keep new vigorous growth coming on by the removal of weak three and four-year-old wood. Young fruit trees need little pruning beyond shaping slightly, but after they have started to bear fruit, considerable growth should be removed each spring, so that the light and air are distributed evenly through the whole tree.

University Of Alberta Develops A New Variety Of Wheat Said To Be Drouth Resistant

An Alberta product developed at the University of Alberta, a new variety of wheat will be given a real test this year when it is planted in field areas in the province's drouth districts of the south.

A cross between the famous Canadian Marquis wheat and Kanred, an equally famed grain in the United States winter wheat belt, the new variety, originated by Dr. O. S. Aamodt, professor of genetics and plant breeding at the University of Alberta, has been named "Canus", a derivation of the two nations—Canada and the United States.

A bearded variety, a heritage from the winter wheat side of its ancestry, the new grain is reported to be drouth resistant and to give a higher yield than Marquis.

In tests conducted by the Dominion department of agriculture and the research council of Canada, "Canus" showed an average yield of 32.4 bushels to the acre.

Here are some of the attributes of the newly-developed wheat:

Resistance to drouth, foot rot and bunt, two wheat diseases which have taken heavy toll in the west;

Good stiffness and baking qualities.

Dr. Aamodt's wheat has one disadvantage. It is not resistant to rust, but this not a serious problem in this province as rust is seldom a menace to Alberta producers.

A report, issued to its members by the Alberta wheat pool, says:

"The probability is that Canus will ultimately supplant Marquis over a considerable area of the plains region of western Canada. It will not invade areas where early ripening is required as it takes about the same time to reach maturity as does Marquis."

Ten bushels of the newly-developed Canus wheat will be distributed among farmers of central and southern Alberta this year, according to Dr. O. S. Aamodt, University of Alberta, originator of Canus. It will be the first time the wheat, on which Dr. Aamodt has worked 15 years has been given to farmers for seed.

Dr. Aamodt does not claim remarkable drouth-resisting strength for his new grain. It is mainly useful in its strength against smut and foot rot, he declares. The national research council, Ottawa, financed his experiments.

Another high grade wheat, said to be equal in quality to Reward and with possibly greater yield and having strong drouth resistance, is in the process of development by Dr. Aamodt and may be available in five years.

Origins Of Canadian Oats

Leading Varieties All Came From Outside The Dominion

The leading varieties of oats in Canada, unlike Canadian wheat, have all originated outside the Dominion, although certain Canadian varieties are gradually advancing to the premier positions. At the present time the most outstanding varieties of oats grown in Canada are Banner, Alaska, and Gopher, all of which have come from the United States, and Victory which was introduced from Sweden. Among other varieties is Legacy, a new promising origination of the Central Experimental Farm at Ottawa, which has done particularly well in Northern Saskatchewan, Central and Northern Alberta, and in the Eastern Townships of Quebec. Cartier, a production of Macdonald College, Quebec, may eventually replace Alaska in Quebec province as the standard early oat for Eastern Canada, while reports over a period of years show that O.A.C. 72 and O.A.C. 144, from the Ontario Agricultural College, yield well, the former on the lighter and the latter on the heavier soils of Southwestern Ontario. Of other varieties, Anthony was introduced into Manitoba from the United States in 1900; Gold Rain, of Swedish origin, does well in Eastern Canada, and White Cross, another from the United States, appears to be best adapted to Northern Alberta conditions.

WHAT DOES YOUR HANDWRITING REVEAL?

By LAWRENCE HIBBERT
(Grapho-Analyst)

(All Rights Reserved)

(Editor's Note: An analysis from your handwriting will often provide an insight into latent characteristics that will change your entire life. The author makes an interesting offer following this week's article.)

This week's mail brought a rather poignant letter from a girl who lives in Winnipeg. I am reproducing it because you can read it and decide what you would do if you were in a similar position.

"Dear Mr. Hibbert: I am bringing my problem to you because you have helped so many others, and it may be that you can shed a ray of hope in my own case. I have been going with a young man for some time, and there has for some time been a tacit arrangement that we should be married."

"Latterly, however, my friend has been going out with another girl, and I am wondering whether he has got tired of me. He tells me that she can be of great help to him in his business, and that, while he likes her as a friend, that is the only feeling he has for her, and that he still loves me."

"Now, Mr. Hibbert, I love my friend very much, and he seems to be an ideal companion, and I do trust him, but this affair has me worried, because he has not been out with anyone other than myself for a long time. Do you think it means that he is losing his love for me, and that I may lose him? I wish you could help me, and I am sending his writing with my letter."

The writing of this girl shows that she is normally affectionate, maybe a trifle impulsive, and she is generous. She has simple, modest tastes and is, on the whole, an unassuming girl.

But there is one outstanding trait that is not so good. She is inclined to resent slights, and, being somewhat sensitive, perhaps imagines slights where none is meant. And she shows her resentment. It may be that she has got into a habit of "getting her back up" with her boy friend, and he has become a little tired of it, and turns to another girl for a change. He may have no intention of giving up my correspondent, but there is a real danger that he may develop a real interest in the other girl, and that will ripen into love.

His own writing is normal enough. He is not one of the amorous or too flirtatious type, and he has no outstanding vices, such as being deceptive or dishonest.

My advice to my correspondent is that she discourage the trait I have already mentioned. She should avoid anything in the nature of "carrying a chip" on her shoulders. And she should strive to keep things on the old footing. It certainly will not help her to talk a lot about the other girl, and show her boy friend that she thinks she may lose him.

She should do everything she can to show him that he means a great deal to her. Do not take anything for granted.

No man likes to be nagged and the tendency shown in this girl's writing is rather like nagging. She may not know it, because so many people who have this unfortunate habit are really unaware of it. But it has broken more romances and spoiled more marriages than probably any other single cause.

(Have you any problems in which you need advice? Do you wish to know what your friends are really like, and what are your own real characteristics? A personal analysis would help you a great deal. Send specimens of the writing you want analysed, and state birthdate in each case. Enclose 10c coin for each specimen, and enclose with it stamped addressed envelope, to: Lawrence Hibbert, care of Winnipeg Newspaper Union, 175 McDermot Ave., Winnipeg, Man. Letters are confidential, and replies will be forwarded as quickly as possible. Some delay is unavoidable, however, owing to the large number of letters that are coming in.)

Arrangement Renewed

The government has renewed for another 15 months an arrangement under which the Dominion reimburses provincial workmen's compensation boards and employers of war pensioners having disability of 25 per cent. and more when the pensioners have met with industrial accidents. The arrangement covers also imperial veterans resident in Canada.

Giant Aqueduct Is Now Nearing Completion In Italy

Italy's giant new Apulian Aqueduct, which will supply 302 towns and villages with water, is nearing completion after 29 years of work.

The main conduit will be one of the largest water conveyers in the world, and its length, with branches, will total 920 miles. Already 193 towns and villages are receiving supplies.

Each of the 2,500,000 inhabitants served by the aqueduct will have an average supply of 18 gallons a day. These people have hitherto had to rely on rainfall for supplies, there being a total absence of underground springs.

Signor Mussolini's government is thus completing a work which was first conceived by Julius Caesar, who also attempted the reclamation of the Pontine Marshes, in which two new towns have been built.

The main conduit of the Apulian Aqueduct is 152 miles long, and of this length 67 miles passes through tunnels. The reservoirs will total 155, of which 118 have already been completed and seven are now under construction. There will be 27 pumping stations, of which 23 are completed.

The cost of the aqueduct is estimated at about £11,150,000.

French Veterans To Visit Canada

Several hundred French war veterans will visit Canada next August, the association of ex-combatants announced. Visits will be made to Quebec and Montreal where groups of Canadian veterans, who saw service in France, will entertain the French party, which will also spend several days in New York as guests of the American Legion.

Based On Measurements

Explanation Of Why Sun's Rays Hotter In Winter

The sun's rays reaching the earth are hotter in the winter than in the summer, if measurements in both seasons are made at the same altitude of the sun, according to Dr. Bernhard Haurwitz, research associate at the Blue Hill Meteorological Observatory, Harvard University, Cambridge, Mass.

Winter is a cold period, not because the sun's rays are cooler, but because there are so many fewer hours of sunlight in winter than in summer, and because the rays strike the earth at a lower angle on the average.

The fact that the sun's rays are hotter in winter is due to several causes, Dr. Haurwitz found. One is that the earth is nearer the sun at this season. Another is that water vapor is much less, which is important because water vapor absorbs a good deal of solar radiation. The third factor is that winter air is much clearer than summer air, and that dust in the summer air cuts off more of the sun's heat.

Little Mildred was poking at something in the grass. Suddenly she said:

Mildred—"Oh, Mother dear, here is a little green snake."

Woman (very cautious)—"Keep away from it, darling. It might be as dangerous as a ripe one."

Gradually somewhat wearily, international trade is fighting its way through a world maze of skyscraper tariffs, quotas and exchange controls. British returns indicate that an ebbing tide has again begun to flow.

Progress is steady if slow. "The British trader," says the annual report of the London Steamship Owners' Association, "continues to be hampered over wide areas of the world by political disturbances, by currency and exchange difficulties and by quotas, tariffs and other restrictions on trading."

A glance over the European scene reveals a curious picture.

While Premier Pierre Flandin of France talks of the need for free trade, countries of central Europe strengthen their exchange controls. Networks of trading agreements endeavor to beat past dams in the stream.

Old-time barter has returned. Germany is building locomotives against saltpetre from Chili. Soviet naphtha is bartered for Australian mutton. Spanish oranges and wine go for Irish eggs.

Seventeen ships are under construction in German yards for barter, some for whale oil. French railway stock has gone for Roumanian oil; Hungarian railcars for Egyptian cotton; Swiss cheese for Russian petrol.

Lithuanian geese are reported to have been offered for locomotives for Czechoslovakia. Live pigs were traded for a Polish automobile. Paris artists are selling pictures for values in kind.

The luckless traveller, as he traverses a constantly changing scene of currency controls, is never quite sure whether too many pounds, pence, marks or francs are not going to land him in jail.

Prince Has Keen Hearing

Beat Trained Men In Identifying Sounds From Trick Records

That the appearance of gray hair at his temples followed by the adoption of horn-rimmed spectacles, naturally, as was recently said in a London dispatch, makes the Prince of Wales look older. It has just been discovered, however, that his hearing is still abnormal. The other day they induced him to go down to a phonograph factory at Hayes, Middlesex, where a competition was being held to "read" the sounds given forth from trick records. The competitors were men trained to the identification of sound, but H.R.H. beat them all; he identified the sound of the striking of a match, of a girl walking on high heels, the call of partridge, grouse and pheasant and various noises reproduced from those in London streets. He missed only one. "That is a waterfall," exclaimed the Prince after hearing one record. "Well, it wasn't a bad shot," he said, laughing, when told that it was a glass of water being poured out.

Early-Ripening Wheat

New Type Has Been Developed At Kansas State Agricultural College

A new type of wheat has been developed at Kansas State Agricultural College, and cereal chemists met at Kansas City to discuss what to do about it.

The question is whether the new grain shall be released for commercial production.

It has been named "Quivira" after the legendary city which drew Coronado across the Kansas plains in search of gold.

An early-ripening type of hard winter wheat, it was produced by crossing Prelude, a spring wheat of the north, with Kanred, hard winter wheat now used widely in the south-west.

Flies' legs are used to manufacture the false eyelashes fashionable with women.

The apricot is believed to be a native plant of Western and Central Asia.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

BIRTHDAY PICTURES

It's never too early to start taking pictures of the babies and in later years they will prove to be one of your priceless possessions.

Too many parents look upon their children's birthday anniversaries only as a time to give them a party or a present. No one will argue against that angle of birthday celebrations. Birthday parties and gifts were in vogue long before our time on this earth and will continue long after our demise, but there can be another feature of the celebration from which both parents and children will get long-time enjoyment, to wit: the birthday snapshot.

Suppose you are to be parents of one of the quarter of a million babies to be born in Canada this year. It won't be easy to remember exactly how that baby looked ten years from now, but a few snapshots will keep the likeness for you. True, if you are the father, you are lucky in these prophylactic times, to be permitted to see your newly-born heir for several days after Sir Stork has delivered his package, unless through the heavy glass of a well guarded window or door. But when the nurses and doctors finally concede that you are not a common carrier of encephalitis lethargica or what other germs you are supposed to have, you should exercise your authority. Tell them you are determined to shoot the baby, then laugh lightly, and walk in with your camera.

Every month is usually considered a birthday in a baby's life until he is a year old. At least a picture a month should be made of the new boarder for the first year. You will be surprised and delighted in seeing the changes which the pictures record. After that one of you should see that the camera is always loaded, for you can never tell when your baby is going to take his first cautious, faltering step—and what an event in your life, even if it means nothing to the baby just yet. The baby is quite matter-of-fact about this adventure, but you get all excited, let out a couple of whoops, gasp, laugh and probably scare the infant so thoroughly that he falls down and has to do it all over again.

The chances are that you will not be prepared for that first step, or if you should happen to be holding the camera in your hand you will, in your excitement, probably have it turned the wrong direction and get an out-of-focus picture of your mid-section. But don't miss this moment of moments the next time. Have your camera and yourself ready for action.

There never seems to be enough of these baby pictures to go around, for there are grandmothers, aunts, cousins and friends in distant cities who are always looking forward to receiving a snapshot of the newly arrived commander of the "infantry."

There's always the "first time" for everything and this applies to thousands of events in a baby's life. There is the first time he discovers he has toes, and immediately decides in his own little mind that they are something good to eat. His first smile, and then that great moment when he reaches out with his chubby little arms and says, "Blah," which is at once interpreted by the parents to mean "Daddie" or "Mommie," sometimes depending on who is governor of the hacienda.

Volumes could be written about baby pictures but space is limited here. Whatever you do, however, don't forget that snapshots of the kiddies are important right now and in later years they will prove to be one of your priceless possessions when your children become mothers and fathers and you are among those known as grandparents.

LESS REPRESENTATION

Would it not be a fine thing if public sentiment could be stirred in favor of Social Credit? Mr. Aberhart has succeeded in arousing public opinion along one line of action, and no other man has succeeded in recent years. He has demonstrated that a leader with sufficient conviction and personality can mobilize a powerful force that compels consideration.

Any leader with a concrete proposal has a great advantage, and the trouble with the urge for reduced representation in governments is that it has not been developed along any one definite line. Almost every one agrees that the country is overburdened with government, but the question is where a start should be made. First the British North America Act with its ratio of representation would have to be altered.

There are many who believe that the three prairie provinces could be administered much more economically if they were united as one huge province. There are actually no reasons why there should be three separate departments of health and education, three lots of movie censorship, three agricultural departments, or even three departments of public works. The consistent interests of the three provinces are very similar.

But each has built up a little government machine to administer identical problems. This constitutes a quite unnecessary expenditure and it is strange that such waste has not been seriously challenged and the benefit of a union not been driven home to the people in any convincing way. It has been frequently suggested—and without joking—that the Legislative buildings which would be discarded under such a union, could be turned into mental hospitals for taxpayers. It would be presumed that Regina would be the central capital. There is no doubt that a province of such size and uniformity of interest could wield much more power than under the present division into three separate entities.—Vulcan Advocate.

Correspondence.

To the Editor:

I have followed with interest the letters for and against Social Credit as advocated by Wm. Aberhart, B.A., which have appeared weekly in your paper since Mr. Lew Wrigglesworth touched off the powder.

One thing, to me, is very obvious, the "knockers" have no solution to offer in place of the above system. In fact I have failed to find anything constructive in their criticisms. In a cosmopolitan country such as ours we cannot all be expected to see things in the same light, but in pulling to pieces another person's policies we should be prepared to advance something to take their place.

We are all aware of the suffering and poverty in our midst, also that this condition has persisted and has got gradually worse within the last four years. Our present government has done nothing to permanently relieve this situation. We believe that the reason is not altogether their insufficiency, but the system under which they work.

Anyone who takes the time to study the fundamental principles of Social Credit will find that it is not "something for nothing," but a guaranteed living to those who are able to work; comfort and security for those unable to work; a system which enables us to help those less fortunate than ourselves. Is this not nearer the teaching of Christ than the present system of dictatorship by a few financiers who know nothing, and apparently care nothing for the suffering they are causing?

I do not say that Social Credit will immediately cure all of our economic ills, that we will live in a land of milk and honey, but I do believe that it is the only solution offered that has a chance to save us from bankruptcy or revolution.

Have you ever noticed the old, old man sweeping the streets? Take a walk down to the Belcher Hospital then next in Calgary. The present system cannot hide all its "benefits."

In Flanders fields the poppies grow, While to Alberta's hills we go To keep our faith with those who lie beneath the crosses row on row, Be ours the torch to hold it high.

The Anti-Social-Credit guy Would pass the buck to those on high.

"It can't be done," they wail and cry.

"The B.N.A., oh me, oh my." It can't, if we're afraid to try).

Take up the quarrel with the foe! This challenge twenty years ago rang thro' the land! Who is the foe? The same as twenty years ago, The money-lords of Rotten Row.

"Lost we forget," that cannot be, Tho' ten times twenty years go by, Ours is the task, yes, you and I, For all of us should brothers be. "Come on, you Social Credit guy."

Respectfully yours,

L. P. WORTHINGTON

Week in the Legislature

By T. B. Windross

Edmonton Alta.—The legislature after long debate and careful consideration Wednesday, passed the estimates for the fiscal year 1935-36 and has begun taking up its legislative program in earnest. Friday, His Honor Chief Justice Harvey, as administrator of the province in the absence of Hon. W. L. Walsh, lieutenant-governor, came down to the house and gave the royal assent to the first batch of five bills that have passed the assembly this session.

One of the bills was the appropriation act, which provides funds for the financing of the province for the fiscal year. This bill provides for a total expenditure of $23,876,579 made up of $18,726,253 to income and $5,150,326 to capital account.

Other business transacted during the week by the legislature included consideration of amending legislation for several bills now on the statutes and for which changes were considered necessary. The correspondence and a copy of an agreement between the government and Max Ball, petroleum engineer of Toronto and Denver, Colorado, was laid on the table by Premier G. Reid, which is the first step in the development of a $1,000,000 separation plant at the McMurray tar sands area in northern Alberta.

This plant has to be commenced this year and to be completed by September 1936. The agreement is for a period of 21 years and covers a lease of 3,840 acres out of the 8,000 of provincial lands in the area. Construction of a 250-ton separation plant is the final objective. The initial outlay for the first unit of the separation plant will amount to $150,000.

During the week suggestions for a greatly reduced legislature were made by Hon. George Hoadley, minister of health and telephones, not as a plan sponsored by the government but merely as a possible scheme of his own suggestion. It would mean a tremendous saving to the province in the cost of government. His idea is for a council of not more than 20 members to meet once a month and each member of which would have a sort of cabinet standing. He called it a business administration plan.

Actions of some municipal councils in the province in not being fair in their dealings with those whose property was in tax arrears was severely scored during a debate when the house was in committee of the whole, Friday, by A. M. Matheson, U.F.A. of Vegreville, who thought the bill to provide for the consolidation agreements and payment of back taxes in instalments should include mandatory features.

One section of the bill, to which Mr. Matheson took exception, proposes that a municipality may bring a plan into operation by passing a by-law before the first of September in any year adopting the act for the year. This was the feature he wanted made mandatory.

Hon. Hugh Allen, minister of municipal affairs, said the rural districts organization favored the legislation provided for in the bill, without compulsory features.

The bill remained in committee and no action was taken at that time in the matter.

Thursday a sensation was sprung on the house by charges of Omer St. Germain, Liberal, and former U.F.A. member, that before he crossed the floor of the house last year, he had been approached by a member of the then premier's staff to offer that if he did not cross the floor his son Gerard, then an employee in the civil service, would be given a promotion. He said that immediately he left the U.F.A. his son had been dismissed.

Flat denials of the charges were made by former premier, J. E. Brownlee, who said he knew nothing of Mr. St. Germain's decision to cross the house at the time stated. Premier Reid also stated there was no truth in the statement and former minister of public works, O. L. McPherson joined in the denials.

Douglas Sails April 26.

Major C. H. Douglas, noted British economist, who has been engaged under a two-year contract as reconstruction adviser to the government, will leave England for this province on April 26, according to word received by Premier Reid.

"I do not know when he will arrive. No doubt he will come to Alberta just as soon as possible," said Premier Reid.

Hon. George Hoadley, declared the member of St. Albert, Mr. St. Germain, had never been approached with any such intention or for such a purpose by him, although the member stated Mr. Hoadley was one who had called him on the telephone. Hon. Hugh Allen, minister of lands and mines, stated that the son of the member of St. Albert had been dismissed months after his father's change of political allegiance. "He was dismissed because his services were unsatisfactory." The dispute caused considerable excitement.

New Body Lines and More Room in 1935 Ford V-8

THE largest and roomiest cars Ford has ever built, with new body lines of advanced streamline design, are illustrated above in this Ford V-8 de luxe Tudor sedan for 1935. Sedans seat six passengers in comfort. Luxurious appointments are new. The eleven body types are all finished in new baked enamel which is said to need only washing to restore its high lustre. Cars are approximately eight inches longer from bumper to bumper and seats are wider. Chassis improvements, including moving the engine forward more than eight inches and new spring suspension, add to riding comfort, especially of rear seat passengers. Directed-flow crankcase ventilation is an improvement of the 80 horsepower V-8 engine.

GET RID OF THE CROWS

(By JACK MINER)

My reason, dear reader, for writing this article is simply to encourage you to take more interest in our great out-of-doors and closer study of the so-called wild creatures that occupy it. Yes, and to ask you to study them closer for yourself, since at the present day there are so many indoor naturalists writing and misleading the public. This is why I am asking all classes of humanity to take a deeper interest. When you are driving, walking, running or flying, keep both eyes open so as to gain more from personal observations, and when you see a crow pursued and pecked by smaller birds, stop and ask yourself why? Surely they don't want to eat him. Then, why are they chasing him?

Jack Miner in the days of his youth.

Or you may see a killdeer or other species of bird fluttering and hobbling out from right near you. Immediately you are convinced that she is crippled or the back of her wing is broken, since she keeps falling over herself every time she attempts to get away. Of course, you are going to catch her and see just what is wrong. But soon you find you can get just so close and no closer and when you have yourself out of breath you will get discouraged and stop, for you find the bird you are pursuing can fly fairly well and is five times further from you than she was when you started. Now, please ask yourself why and go back to where you first saw her. But be careful where you put your feet, for you might step on her eggs or one of her babies. Keep both eyes open and be convinced as to how these God-given creatures, in the majority of cases, take advantage of color protection. For illustration: if it is a killdeer's nest, see how well she has gathered pebbles, shells, bits of wood or fragments of anything of the color of her eggs, and placed them all around the nest. Remember this is the mother's doings, and when you see a ruffed grouse (Partridge) not over three days' old, hide among leaves the color of itself, what do you call this? I simply call it God.

In the spring of 1879, which was the second year we were in Canada, I put in every Sunday hunting for young foxes, to keep them as pets. With axe in hand, I would scour the woods for miles around and, when I heard something meowing and screaming, which sounded like an old Tom-cat making his last screech, instead of running for home to tell mother I was chased by a lynx or wild cat, I quietly marked the exact direction from which the sound came. When about one quarter of a mile away, the squalling usually ceased. Now I turned and, if the noise took me straight north, I went back south from where I first heard it, keeping both eyes open for hollow logs and so forth and for remnants of rabbits, ruffed grouse or turkey feathers, and in the majority of cases I would soon be using the axe to chop out the young foxes.

Sometime ago I read a nine page letter sent to me from a gentleman explaining that "it was not the English sparrow that was driving the barn and eave swallows out, but that the systematic control of house flies by the human race was robbing the swallows of their food and starving them out." Really, it was a beautifully written letter and, if one did not know better, he might be induced to believe it. But the fact is, the English sparrow is the direct cause of the decrease of fully ninety per cent. of our barn and eave swallows. I haven't seen an eave swallow in Ontario for twenty-five or thirty years. In Alaska there are no English sparrows, but in July, 1925, I counted forty-seven occupied eave swallows' nests under the eaves of a building we stayed in while there. In other words, they are there now just the same as they were here in eastern America 50 years ago, and would be here now were it not for the devilish, dominating ways of this imported, undesirable house sparrow, a dirty bird that doesn't do as much good in a year as a swallow will in a week.

Some years ago, I saw an article in a sporting paper stating that canvas-back ducks and Canada geese migrated at the rate of 120 miles per hour. One hundred and twenty miles per hour, or, in other words two miles per minute! Say, I am from Missouri and you have got to show me! During the last ten years, I have been privileged to give this question a fair test and, on several occasions, when the wild geese have left my home for Hudson Bay, I have wired ahead of them, I wired to the C.P.R. agents at Stralak, Ontario, and to the C.P.R. agents at Cochrane, Ontario, and in every case I received a reply. If those agents saw the same geese that left here, these birds were making between forty or fifty miles per hour. Another short but accurate test I have been making recently is as follows: My oldest son lives two miles south of me on a road running east and west, the same as the one I live on. The wild geese that make their home with me at least five months of the year, all go out to Lake Erie to roost, returning early the next morning. Lake Erie is three miles south of my home. When I hear them honking and see them towering high before leaving the sanctuary getting ready to cross over this three miles of no-man's land, I get my son on the telephone. As I say, he is two miles south of me between the lake and the sanctuary. He holds the receiver with a watch in his hand, and just as a big distinguishable flock crosses the road at my house I call "Go." He marks the exact time, goes to the road and, of course, can see the geese coming. Here are the results of the last three tests: First, 24 minutes. Second, with a nice breeze in their favor, lifting them along—two minutes and eleven seconds. Third, as they were facing quite a stiff breeze, four minutes. Remember, these birds are from three to five hundred feet high before they leave the sanctuary, therefore they are not doing climbing after they leave here.

Oh, but you sigh and say, "What has all of this to do with Crows?" Nothing at all. I have only unrolled these experiments to encourage you to study for yourself.

The first hunting I did in Canada was crow hunting. This was May, 1868. We shot the crows because they pulled up our corn, and from boyhood up, whenever I started to hunt any creature I studied its habits. Soon I found myself practicing how to imitate the call of the creature that was causing the young crow's trouble; I would practice this quivering, cawing and hooting in the early morning, when all was silent, and let the echo from the forest speak for itself as to the perfection of the deception. Then I would conceal myself in the thick undergrowth of the woods, in easy range of a few dead tree-tops for Mr. Crow to perch on. I would then start giving these low delicate caws of distress, just the same as I heard the young crow utter, now and then giving the low hoot of the owl. Many, many of these black, old nest-robbers have brought food or come to protect the wrong baby but, to my surprise, they were not feeding their young on corn. As I held these old

To Combat Drouth

Winnipeg Organization Takes First Step To Co-ordinate Efforts

The Canadian Conservation Institute, Winnipeg branch, was organized recently as a first step in co-ordinating efforts to end drouth ravages and protect resources on the Canadian prairies.

Premier John Bracken of Manitoba was elected chairman of the advisory council of 30 members, and T. C. Main, divisional engineer of the Canadian National Railways, was elected president of the active executive committee.

The Winnipeg branch hopes to foster organization of similar branches in other cities of Saskatchewan and Alberta with a three-fold objective. Both Premier Bracken and Mr. Main have been active in urging steps to protect against drouth periods which took a heavy toll of agriculture on the prairies in the past five years.

The objectives declared the institute aimed to co-operate in combating drouth and solving problems arising therefrom; to co-operate in promoting efficient use and scientific conservation of resources in a balanced program of co-ordinated development, and to provide machinery whereby citizens may contribute to the utmost toward accomplishing these objectives.

Remains Of Irish Sea Monster Has Been Offered

Rivalling the elusive Scotch marine monster of Loch Ness, the remains of an Irish sea monster have been offered to the British museum, it was learned.

The Irish specimen, known as a "chalandose Lachuss," and said to have been caught on the west coast of Ireland, seems from its description to be fully as remarkable as its Scotch rival.

It is said to look like a shark except that it is much longer and much thinner, has a long, beak-like mouth with many needle-sharp teeth set closely in its jaws like a comb, and has six gill-openings instead of five. It is said to bear a remarkable resemblance to some of the fish-like creatures known hitherto only by their fossil remains.

Grows Large Apples

Eight-pound apples have been grown by Mr. Lobitaro Metanda, of Nagane, Japan. Although sour, they have a good flavor. Their size is the result of many experiments. Now they are to be grown for sale.

Skipper—Well, you see, they couldn't have the ocean tide if there were no knots.

Starvation The Cure

When People Do Not Have Money To Buy Rich Foods Then Health Is Improved

In days of depression, general health is better than in days of opulence and fine living, several doctors told the House of Commons during a health debate. Dr. J. P. Howden (Lib., St. Boniface) said "starvation is the cure for many diseases" and it was because people did not have the money to buy rich foods that their health improved. And it was true, Dr. Howden added, that "many people dig their graves with their teeth."

A new disease of corn, which may become important, has been reported in Florida.

"Wait a bit. I've got a better plan than that. . . ." Dustin's grin was the grin of a dog who sees the meat that he intends to seize. "Wait! If I had sprung that on Joe Carr, he'd simply wait till this Gerald Keene, his partner, turns up. Young Keene might have the money. If he has, then old Carr would get out of my clutches. See? Keene would sure help Carr meet that note. He'd sure do it if he ever learns of what we found in that mine and prospect of old man Kane's. I told Carr that if he'll get Edith to agree to marry me, I'll call off the suit about Soda Springs. He can't finance that suit anyhow. See?"

"I see; you've given your hand away when there was no need to," said Goddard testily.

"Huh. Suppose I've got four good aces in the hole. What then?"

"Show me your aces," growled Spike. "Damned if I can see any sign of an ace in this mess."

"All right. I'll show you. Do you happen to remember the date that young imp of hell, Gerald Keene, the owner of the other half of the Hour-glass, is due here?"

"On the tenth of next month, it said. This is the next month and today's the ninth. He's due in Seco tomorrow night, I reckon."

"All right. Now listen to me. . . ." Dustin sat forward and tilted his chair on its front legs. . . . "You and I've been partners for a good many years. That right?"

Spike Goddard stared at him. Was his partner losing his mind? He studied Dustin for a long three minutes and Dustin grinned quietly at him. Finally:

"We've been strippin' the Hour-glass of everything its got for more'n five years," said Spike. "If one of us told what he knows about the other, he'd sure as hell go to jail, I reckon. We've soaked away every dollar we could raise. We've got seventeen thousand in cold cash right now in our office safe. You don't need to have me say it but . . . Make your game. I'm playin' her as she lays."

Dustin nodded complete satisfaction.

"I knew you'd say that," he said. "Now listen. . . . Old Kane located that mine. It's on the Hour-glass, I know that. Kane and Peyotl and I went there. Kane showed me the mine. Then he and Peyotl got into a fight over some water. I wasn't in camp when it happened but I got back to find Kane dead with his head all mashed in and Peyotl in one of his confounded fits after dopin' all up with his stuff. . . ."

"That you give him . . ." said Spike, grinning.

Dustin's face turned the color of old dough. He leaned forward and gripped Spike's arm.

"If you weren't my partner, I'd kill you for that word," he said.

Spike shivered. He felt suddenly as though his veins had been filled with ice water.

"Go on," he said awkwardly.

"I'm listenin' . . ."

"Aye. Well, when Peyotl saw what he'd done, he went all to pieces. Old Kane is buried up Red Water canon. No one will ever find him there. Well. . . . This man Gerald Keene is Gerald Kane. He's the nephew of old Kane. . . . That's his name, d'ye see? Gerald Kane is comin' out here to investigate the reported death of his uncle, Dad Kane. . . . If the murderer is discovered Peyotl Gregg will hang. . . . Is it gettin' clear to you?"

"Good God," said Spike explosively. "Do you expect me to believe that . . ."

"I don't care a damn if you believe it or not so long as Peyotl believes it. Get me so far?"

"I sure do. . . ." Spike glanced admiringly at his partner. This would be a master stroke indeed. If Peyotl Gregg, the well-known "hop-head" could be got to kill Gerald Keene then Keene's share of the Hour-glass would pass to old Joe Carr, and they held old Joe Carr's note for the Hour-glass. . . . where Kane and Dustin had located the gold.

"By God," he said, "you've hit it. But I swear I don't see how you can pull it off."

"You don't have to see. Go on out of here and tell Peyotl that I want to see him at once. Not a word more than that."

Spike went and ten minutes later Peyotl dropped his hat at the door and came shamblingly into the room. Dustin looked up from some pretended work at the desk.

"It's a good thing for you, Peyotl, that you came at once," he said. "I'm sorry for you, but I don't see how

I can help you. . . . Remember old Dad Kane, Peyotl?"

"For heaven's sake lay off that, Mist' Sam. . . ." The man's arm flung up to guard before his eyes and he shivered as though with an ague. "I ain't slept a wink since I came back. . . . I'd never get sleep if it wasn't for . . . fer . . . you know what . . . ." He tugged a red-and-green cigarette packet from his pocket.

Dustin snatched it from him, tore out four cigarettes and gave them to him, and thrust the package into his desk drawer.

"You damned fool. I've told you a dozen times not to get any of these things except what I give you. I give you your full allowance. Just suppose you take too many of these and talk too much. You know what'll happen. You'll be hung as high as Haman."

Peyotl looked dazed. He had looked for a coin and perhaps an errand and he found a threat that he only half understood. He could not guess what was coming, but he knew that he was on the verge of being violently ill. His stomach was queasy. Man, born of woman, cannot smoke unlimited peyotl cigarettes to kill the memory of a murder that he never committed and still carry himself like a free man. Peyotl squirmed and Dustin gladly noted it.

"I wish I could help you, Peyotl," he said. "But I don't see how I can."

"What's the matter, boss? What's come up?"

"You know damned well what you did. The question is how're you goin' to keep the world from knowin' what you did, too? I'll hate to see you at the end of a rope, Peyotl. You remember Wills?"

Peyotl gulped audibly and sat down. He remembered Wills very well. Caught while in the very act of changing brands on two horses of the Cross Keys stock, Wills had been given two hours to confess his sins. The time had been wholly insufficient and Wills had gone to some questionable place with a lariat about his neck. Peyotl remembered seeing the long body swinging in the wind under a giant live oak while a yellow-hammer and two woodpeckers hammered cheerfully above him. He had never forgotten it and Dustin knew it.

"You see, Peyotl, it's this way. When you killed old man Kane, we thought he was just an old desert rat who had no friends. It seems we were wrong. He had some friends back East. He had a nephew. His name is Gerald Kane or Keene or something like that. Anyhow old man Kane must have written him that he had found a gold mine. This nephew telegraphed that he will be out here to-morrow night to look up his uncle. You know what that means. Every one knows that I've been grub-stakin' old man Kane. They'll come to me first of all. If they ask me any questions, Peyotl, you can see that I've got to tell 'em the truth. I'm willin' to help you all I can, Peyotl, but not to the extent of perjury. Of course I know just about how it was. . . . You smoked that damned stuff that I've told you to leave alone. You had a bad dream and you got into a doped row with old man Kane and killed him. . . ."

Peyotl shuddered. "Mexico ain't so fur away," he muttered.

"They'd get you there. They extradite for murder in Mexico. I guess you've got to pay the bill, Peyotl. . . . If this man Gerald Kane turns up. . . ."

He had suggested the answer even to a drug-deadened brain.

Mothers' Pensions

British Columbia To Increase Allowance By A Small Amount

Recipients of mothers' pensions will have their allowances increased by a small amount, it was stated in the British Columbia legislature by Mrs. Paul Smith (Lab., Vancouver-Burrard). It will be the first step in an upward scale and will be put into effect during the next six months, she said. The government had also decided that mothers with only one child should be eligible for pensions. Although the act provided for such eligibility the practice for years had been to exclude them from benefits.

TRY FASTER WAY TO RELIEVE A COLD

Discovery Bringing

Almost Instant Relief to Millions

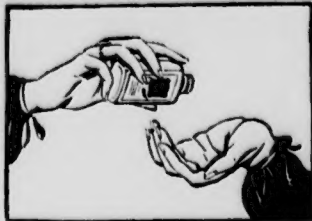

Follow Simple Directions:

When you have a cold, remember the simple treatment pictured here . . . prescribed by doctors as the quick, safe way.

Results are amazing. Ache and distress go immediately. Because of Aspirin's quick-disintegrating property, Aspirin "takes hold"—almost instantly. Your cold is relieved "quick as you caught it!"

All you do is take Aspirin and drink plenty of water. Do this every 2 to 4 hours the first day—less often afterward . . . if throat is sore, the Aspirin gargle will ease it in as little as 2 minutes.

Ask your doctor about this. And be sure you get ASPIRIN when you buy. It is made in Canada and all druggists have it. Look for the name Bayer in the form of a cross on every Aspirin tablet. Aspirin is the trade mark of the Bayer Company, Limited.

1. Take 2 Aspirin tablets.

2. Drink full glass of water. Repeat treatment in 2 hours.

3. If throat is sore, crush and stir 3 Aspirin tablets in a third of a glass of water and gargle. This eases the soreness in your throat almost instantly.

DOES NOT HARM
THE HEART

Little Helps For This Week

"I have learned in whatsoever state I am therewith to be content," Philipians 4:2.

No longer forward or behind I look in hope or fear; But grateful, take the good I find, The best of now and here.

—J. G. Whittier.

If we wish to gain contentment we might try such rules as these: Allow thyself to complain of nothing, not even the weather.

Never picture thyself to thyself under any circumstances in which thou art not.

Never compare thine own lot with that of another.

Never dwell on the morrow. Remember it is God's, not thine. The heaviest part of sorrow is often to look forward to it. "The Lord will provide."

Never allow thyself to dwell on the wish that things were otherwise than they were. God Almighty loves thee better and more wisely than thou dost thyself.

An Unusual Accident

A strange accident occurred when a motorist approaching a bridge near Pershore, Worcestershire, was held up by two stationary motor cyclists. Their machines stood close together in the road. They leaned towards each other, their heads touching. When the motorist alighted to complain, he found both unconscious. They had collided and their machines had interlocked. They were taken to hospital with bad injuries.

Camel May Be Displaced

And now the motor car may displace the camel. By use of 15-ton transport units, recently tested over 10,000 miles in northern Australia, it appears adequate and cheap service can be provided in undeveloped areas, combined with economical road construction. The unit reduced the rates to the level of those charged for hauling by camel teams.
